Alexander Wade (f. m. c.), a peace warrant by Johnson (f. m. c.); own bond in $300 for six months.

Joseph Martin, suspected felon; bail in $300 for one year.

HOTEL ROYALISTE.—This crime is on the increase in our city. One has but to visit the Police Court from day to day to be convinced of the fact. During the past week not a day has passed that the criminal's bench has not been crowded. On Wednesday night a man by the name of Rice, from Carroll county, arrived at the St. Cloud Hotel, where he put up for the night. Another man by the name of Joe Martin arrived at the same hotel and registered himself as from Ohio. During the night Rice was taken sick and left his room. Upon his return he missed his pocket-book containing $165. Martin left the hotel before day and went to the Bowles Home, on Market street, where he procured a room. While there he robbed a man by the name of Daley, with whom he roomed, of $16, after which he left. He was before the Police Court yesterday as a suspected felon, and was held in $800 for one year's good behavior.

ROSITA, THE GREAT ROPE DANCER, AT NIAGARA FALLS.—This young lady, whose wonderful achievements on the tight-rope render her the cynosure of all eyes in Jane Engle's Rivel Tropic, we learn has recently concluded an engagement with the hotel companies at Niagara Falls to cross the catwalk at the precise point accomplished by Blodding, and to commence her hazardous task on the 20th of August. Her intended performance for some months past warrants every one to believe that she will be successful in this new field of enterprise. As an evidence of her daring, we are informed that just previous to Mrs. English's recent visit to Toronto, M'le Rosita, before a large number of people, crossed the river Avon at Stratford, C. W., the rope being stretched eighty-seven feet, at a height of fifty feet from the water, and the journey with apparent ease. She will no doubt be quite a lion at Niagara this summer.

DEATH OF DR. WILLIAMSON P. FISHER.—We regret to learn of the death of Dr. Fisher, who died in Henderson, Ky., on the 20th inst. Dr. Fisher was well known in this city, having been a resident many years prior to his moving to Henderson. He was for some time Superintendent of the Louisville Hospital, and forty-eight doctors sent off in iron, as follows: Thirty-seven to Nashville, three to Lexington and eight to Cairo.

WOOD'S THEATRE.—LAST NIGHT OF THE MINSTRELS.—This evening Arlington, Kelly & Leon's minstrels make their last appearance in our city. During the past two weeks they have been greeted with the largest and most fashionable audience that have assembled in Wood's theater this season. The bill selected for their closing night is an excellent one, and the house will no doubt be crowded.

OUT IN THE WORLD.—By T. S. Arthur: Carlton, N. Y.—We are indebted to F. A. Cramp for a copy of the above named book. T. S. Arthur is too well known as an author to need any recommendation. His name itself is an introduction to his book sufficient to cause every one to desire a more intimate acquaintance.

THE TRIAL OF CAPTAIN MORRIS.—We have already mentioned that Captain Morris had been indicted by court-martial here, and that they failed to agree as to his case. The Captain has been sent to Lexington, where a new court will be convened to investigate his case.

ARREST OF DISBURSTERS.—Yesterday the patrol guard arrested Abraham and John Graham, of company G, Twenty-eighth Kentucky, as deserters. They were sent to barracks No. 1, where they will be confined until tried by court martial.

Two hundred and thirty-eight private and non-commissioned officers and ten commissioned officers belonging to the rebel army at Lexington. They were sent to the military prison, where they will be confined until forward for exchange.

THE RESIGNATION OF CAPT. W. S. HOLDEN.—We have heard that Captain Morris has been promoted by court-martial here, and that they failed to agree as to his case. The Captain has been sent to Lexington, where a new court will be convened to investigate his case.

The resignation of Capt. W. S. Holden, of the Twenty-third Kentucky, and for a long time Inspector of the Post, has been accepted. Capt. Holden has been an efficient officer, and his loss will be severely felt.

Miss Jane Ferguson, who was tried and convicted here some time since, was yesterday sent to Lexington, Ky., where the sentence of the court will be pronounced upon her.

J. West, one of the attentive messengers of the Adams & Co.'s Express, has our thanks for files of Nashville papers furnished in advance of the mail.

Thank to Lewis Kere, messenger of Adams & Co.'s Express, for Cincinnati papers in advance of the mail delivery.

GUERRILLAS ON THE OHIO.

Their Designs and Movements.

It is simply impossible to attempt to disguise the fact that there are several gangs of guerrillas at present in the border counties of Kentucky, committing all kinds of outrages, and as they have been so far unopposed by any Federal force, they are having things all to themselves.

On Tuesday last a gang, whose number we did not learn, entered Brandenburg, robbed the citizens, fired on the steamer Shiloh as she passed up, and recruited a number of men for the rebel service. They remained in the town until the next day, and are said to have belonged to Capt. Jessie's command.

On Tuesday about 4 o'clock in the afternoon, some 250 guerrillas, under command of Capt. Jones and Major Walker Taylor, left Cloverport, where they had been committing their outrages, and marched for Hawesville, where they arrived about half-past 7 the next morning, stopping outside the town and encamping, while they remained until after dinner.

The same party had previously visited Stephenport, where they captured Col. Ben Allen, who commanded the militia. He was secured and taken away, being treated in the meantime with the greatest indulgence. At Stephenport they robbed the stores and citizens, and carried off a number of horses.

They entered the town of Cloverport about 1 o'clock on Wednesday, broke open the stores and helped themselves to what they wanted, stole a number of horses, enlisted a number of recruits, and then left for Hawesville, to which place a portion of the gang had previously sent.

The guerrillas had thins all their own way in Hawesville, and robbed and railed indiscriminately. They broke open stores and took goods such as suited them, stole the best horses to be found in the town, and acted the bandit generally. In the evening they left Hawesville, as they stated, and as is believed, for Owensboro, which town they declared they intended to attack, capture and burn. In this arrangement we think they will be disappointed, and if they should attack the town, we will defend it. The guerrillas were taken into custody by the Sheriff, and for more than twenty-four hours the negroes were on "short ration," having absolutely nothing to eat, excepting their first instalment of liberty.

The Provost Marshal soon made his appearance and ordered the negroes to be admitted. Woodward ordered his men to arm themselves. They quickly seized their guns, drew up in line of battle, with fire to any one who dared to enter. In that hostile attitude they kept negroes, Powers and the Provost at bay. The negroes finally fell back in good order, charged their line, and were successfully repelled in the county jail, under locks and bars. The jail keys were taken into possession by the Sheriff, and for more than twenty-four hours the negroes were on "short ration," having absolutely nothing to eat, excepting their first instalment of liberty.

The Provost Marshal, not being able to secure the jail keys, presented a writ-suit, who, by cutting away some bolts, opened the door and liberated the negroes, who reported to headquarters and duly enlisted soldiers of the United States, and were again remanded to jail. Some of Powers' associates went over to Cannelton and made an effort to raise a force to "clean out" Hawesville for the indignity offered to their fellow citizens of African descent, as they were about to depart to the land of the free and home of the brave, but were not successful.

The Affairs at Hawesville.

The affair of the Science No. 2 being shot into at Hawesville, has been variously given, and in order that our readers may have a true statement of the same, we condense the following from the Owenton Monitor: On Sunday last, a score of negroes who had been secretly recruited by our Powers and a few associates, appeared in the streets of Hawesville, Ky., preparatory to their shipment to Owensboro. The steamer Science happened to land at the wharf to discharge some freight, the negroes were ordered aboard, and aboard they went. A Mr. Beauchamp attempted to arrest a negro belonging to him while yet on the shore, but the negro hastened on the boat, and was fired at by Beauchamp. Instantly a number of pistols were discharged in the direction of the boat, from the midst of a crowd of excited citizens on the shore, inflicting no one on the boat, but riddling the steamer pretty badly.

A man named Coon, associated with Powers, shot into the crowd of citizens from the boat, severely wounding Mr. Charles Dealey, son of Dr. Dealey of Union county, Ky. The ball entered his back and passed through the body. It is feared that he will not recover. The boat escaped with as little cargo, and late in the afternoon arrived at Owensboro, where the negroes disembarked. Powers marched them to the courthouse square, he making a very warlike display at the head of the column, with a cocked hat never worn in his hand. The negroes were not at the gate of the county court, but the Sheriff, with a number of horses, waited for him at the courthouse, and when he reached the gate, he was met by the Sheriff and a number of citizens, who surrounded him and compelled him to give up his arms. Powers was then taken into custody, and was held in $1000, and $1000 bail.

The negroes were then turned over to the State Guard, whose forces are quartered at the courthouse, and were forbidden to enter.

The Provost Marshal soon made his appearance and ordered the negroes to be admitted. Woodward ordered his men to arm themselves. They quickly seized their guns, drew up in line of battle, with fire to any one who dared to enter. In that hostile attitude they kept negroes, Powers and the Provost at bay.

The negroes finally fell back in good order, charged their line, and were successfully repelled in the county jail, under locks and bars. The jail keys were taken into possession by the Sheriff, and for more than twenty-four hours the negroes were on "short ration," having absolutely nothing to eat, excepting their first instalment of liberty.

The Provost Marshal, not being able to secure the jail keys, presented a writ-suit, who, by cutting away some bolts, opened the door and liberated the negroes, who reported to headquarters and duly enlisted soldiers of the United States, and were again remanded to jail. Some of Powers' associates went over to Cannelton and made an effort to raise a force to "clean out" Hawesville for the indignity offered to their fellow citizens of African descent, as they were about to depart to the land of the free and home of the brave, but were not successful.

The guerrillas had thins all their own way in Hawesville, and robbed and railed indiscriminately. They broke open stores and took goods such as suited them, stole the best horses to be found in the town, and acted the bandit generally. In the evening they left Hawesville, as they stated, and as is believed, for Owensboro, which town they declared they intended to attack, capture and burn.

In the winter of 1863, a gang of negroes, led by Powers, came into the town of Hawesville, and committed a number of robberies and depredations.

The negroes were taken into custody by the Sheriff, and for more than twenty-four hours the negroes were on "short ration," having absolutely nothing to eat, excepting their first instalment of liberty.

The Provost Marshal, not being able to secure the jail keys, presented a writ-suit, who, by cutting away some bolts, opened the door and liberated the negroes, who reported to headquarters and duly enlisted soldiers of the United States, and were again remanded to jail.
